

Growing up in two cultures can mean choosing sides. The choice between soccer practice or Chinese school. English or Mandarin. Shumai or chicken wings?

Why choose sides when you can have both? The only side I want to choose is a side of rice.

"In the States, you can buy Chinese food. In Beijing, you can buy hamburgers. It's very close. I feel the world become a big family. A really big family."

— Jet Li

Here are some of my favorite foods and favorite memories. We're family. If Jet Li says so, it must be true. Keep your stomach, mind, and heart open.

Ready to share a meal?

a mood board of art, layouts, words, and typography

The “Model Minority” Myth

Burdened with Worry: How the Pressure to Succeed
Can Affect Asian American Students

(TIME WAITS FOR NO ONE)

